

I think that instead of trying to save high streets that can't be saved(just ask those around you when they last shopped in Enfield) you could use these properties for more homes. I don't think it matters if the homes are between shops and restaurants that are being used and it's generally considered a good thing that people live in town centres so that crime is reduced.