I wish to object to any Green Belt land being used for housing. The whole point of it was to allow people (particularly in Enfield) easy access to countryside either by footpath access, parkland etc.

It is scandalous that this is even being contemplated when there are brown fired sites at various parts in the borough that could be developed in a more environmentally friendly manner. People do not live by rabbit hutch size houses for the poor or giant estates for those with money. They need fresh air, sky, rabbits, wildflowers, birdsong and I would have thought that after the past 19 months which included lockdown it would have been obvious the need for open spaces to enable stability in mental health.

Please stop this vandalism which is chasing the dollars and get some imaginative people in to solve the housing problems. It really isn't that difficult.
