I have lived in Hadley wood for some 35 years now and I moved out to the area from inner London to enjoy the countryside , the cleaner air , the space and the tranquillity.

I am horrified to learn that the council are considering building so many houses on this beautiful green belt land and I strongly object to this badly thought out proposal .

There are other solutions , there are so many areas of London where existing houses are no longer fit for purpose , there are brown field sites, derelict sites ,contaminated sites all more suitable to improvement .

So please reconsider it seems like madness to concrete over fresh green grass meadows in protected historical sites and to build more character less densely packed houses in a beautiful area of green belt

Please re consider this
