

I wanted to formally object to the proposal to redevelop the Sainsbury's on green lanes.

I am not sure what this borough has ever done to upset this council but can you please stop trying to ruin it. If you keep trying to impose these disgraceful ideas (such as LTNs), without even making residents aware of them, then you surely must know yourselves that they're terrible ideas. Otherwise you would be more transparent in the process. You are meant to be a council that serve its constituents and residents. Instead, you seem to just push through idiotic ideas, which you know full well the residents will hate. Hence why you offer no opportunity for consultations.

You must surely question your own moral compasses when you're constantly pushing through changes that you know the residents aren't going to like. I won't even start with the way some of you Enfield councillors talk to your residents on social media. I think you need to take a long hard look at yourselves and remember you are in a position to try and improve the residents lives & area. Not wreck them. Maybe you have chose the wrong career path.

Also, a really easy way to stop all the fly tipping is to bring back the weekly bin collections. Like they do in Barnet, where they have a council that isn't inept or morally bankrupt.
