Re. Consultation on the Draft Local Plan

I have spent some considerable time trying to wade through the extremely lengthy draft local plan. I haven't been able to find an Executive Summary which would have assisted. Whilst I appreciate that the plan was not written for the general public, given that it is now out to the public for consultation a means of identifying the most salient points would have been helpful. I did not find the summary leaflet which was available to be useful as it was very selective in the information that it included.

I do understand that the plan includes a number of proposals to build on green belt land and I strongly object to this. One of the things that makes Enfield an attractive place to live is the green spaces and once lost they can never be regained. Green belt was designed originally for a purpose and there can be no justification in encroaching on what was designated for the good of the community.

Yours sincerely
