I am writing to record my resistance to Enfield Councils plan to develop station car parks and retail spaces into high density housing and accepting one off payments from developers for jobs lost as a result of this.

I am surprised a Labour council would go hand in glove selling off public land to developers in this way, in order to satisfy Boris Johnson's 'build build build' agenda and his closer than comfortable relationship with the construction industry.

As has happened in Walthamstow, another borough which Labour takes for granted, the infrastructure to accommodate all these new homes in terms of doctors/schools etc does not exist, apart from the sheer inappropriateness of these 'blocks' in destroying local character.

Please reconsider, and do not take your voters for granted.
