

Hi,

I recently saw on Twitter that the council is considering building homes on some greenfield sites including a golf course. I think this is fantastic, and the council should be commended for taking steps to reduce the housing crisis in our nations capital. As a London renter, I welcome the council's decision to develop new property, and would support the construction of new homes, including single family homes, flats, hopefully with some courtyards to maintain open spaces.