

I just wanted to voice my support for this development. I come from a working class family in East London and am the first in my family to go to university. After graduating I managed to get a decent job and worked my way up now earning more than £50k a year, whilst to some this isn't much to my parents this is a salary they could only dream of.

Despite all of the above, I am now 34 years old and have embarrassingly had to move back to my parents house in order to have any hope of saving for a deposit for a property of my own.

If we are to make home owning something for everyone and not just for those with rich parents, we need to be building these sorts of developments.